Singing DOLLS

DOLLS will perform for us on April 16th, she is "sultry, sulky Disco filth for creatures of the night, and soundtrack to an underground revolution. It's pouty, sadistic and attitude laden fairytale smut, or as she delicately puts it herself, 'like Trent Reznor banging Madonna in the David Lynch motel,'" according to London's HoxtonAmp.

After abandoning commercial success in Canada, DOLLS relaunched in London as an independent purveyor of darker, dirtier pop - which has earned her a fair few features (Electronic Sound; EQ Music Blog; DrunkenWerewolf; The Sound of Confusion) as well as coveted licensing spots (soundtracking Rimmel London's Moisture Renew Lipstick campaign internationally, for a start).

Check out 'In Control' - the first single off DOLLS + Fauxplay's upcoming album EAT IT UP (releasing May 20th 2016). With 80's electro bass and hooky synth lines, 'In Control' darkly drives a catchy déjà-vu backdrop for DOLLS' trademark lyrical juxtaposition - this time threatening listeners with a gritty, but blasé kind of true love, and delicious punishment.
